Dr Rose is a Marine Biologist and an explorer.

She loves everything about the sea.
Most of all, the mystery of what could be lurking in the deepest darkest waters.

Since she was very little, Dr Rose has loved listening to salty fishermen's wild tales about a great mysterious beast.

An ancient monster, who guards the Fountain of Youth with its great crimson tentacles.

A beast, they tell her, who roams the deepest, darkest oceans, lighting up the water with its magic.

A creature so big, it could eat a whale in one gulp.

It could just be a myth, or it could be true...

They dare to only whisper its name – "Carmella".

So, one day, in the quiet of her lab,
Dr Rose hatches a bold and brilliant plan.

Before long, adventurous scientist friends
of every kind gather to form a crew.

She sets about telling the legend of Carmella to everyone she knows.

“What if legend is truth?” asks Dr Rose.
“What if we can prove that Carmella exists?”

Dr Rose has never taken a submersible dive for an adventure quite like this.
But if she could just take a photograph of Carmella,
it would show the whole world that she was right
to chase a living myth.
It would prove that Carmella is real.
She just has to get down there...
